DETAILED ACTION

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

Claims 1-8 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Fillion et al. (USPN 6341029) in view of JP (3-124385) and Mosavi et al. (USPN 6,252,195).

Fillion et al. discloses a laser apparatus in which the system has an acoustic optical element, which imparts vibrations to the laser beam. As the beam vibrating means for vibrating the beam, an acoustic optical modulator can be used in the case of laser beams and a deflecting coil in the case of electron beams. The vibrations may be in the range of 1-1000 Hz.

Although an optical modulator is taught the actual lens is not. In addition a surgical needle workpiece is not taught.

JP ('385) discloses the use of a vibrating mirror or focusing lens in a laser processing system.

It would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art at the time of the invention to use a vibrating lens as taught by JP ('385) in the Fillion et al. system because it is merely a design variation and rearrangement of parts is known in the art.

Art Unit: 1725

Mosavi et al. discloses forming holes in a surgical needle using an Nd-YAG laser. High-energy laser pulses form a blind hole in the proximal end of a surgical needle.

It would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art at the time of the invention to make surgical needles, as taught by Mosavi et al., in the Fillion et al. system because the vibrational system ensures a high quality bore hole.

The rearrangement of parts was held to have been obvious. In re Japikse 86 USPQ 70.

Response to Arguments

Applicant's arguments with respect to claims have been considered but are moot in view of the new ground(s) of rejection.
